

Review

Last week, we had a socially distanced review with some of the executive leadership team from the trust, including the CEO, Anita Cliff. The review was really positive and recognised improvements in the environment, behaviour and the curriculum! Please find below some of the positives we would like to share with you.

* Leaders have constructed a curriculum that is ambitious and designed specifically for the needs of Brindley Heath. Cultural capital is woven throughout and is driven by enquiry.

* Adults support the learning well, providing immediate feedback, remodelling and securing progress.

* The planned curriculum supports pupils to engage with beliefs and opinions that are different from their own in considered ways .

* All relationships between adults and children seen were positive, purposeful and support children in their learning.

* Thorough and rigorous CPD since January 2020 has supported the development of all staff.

* Leadership roles of pupils have been established, raising the profile of pupil voice across the school.

* Strong subject knowledge evident from leaders.

What are we working on now?

* To ensure that the new curriculum embeds well and ensures the quality of outcomes across the school.

* To develop expectations of pupil's behaviour and conduct during unstructured times to be in line with pupil's behaviour and conduct during lessons.

* To develop subject leaders further to continue to refine their curriculum areas.
